Special Notation

To be made in the image and likeness of God offers two possibilities. Since God is a spirit it would not mean our body, soul, and spirit since God has no body therefore the image of God would mean emotion, intellect, and will. He has all three and we have all three. A second possibility just very recently occurred to me that could well mean our body, soul, and spirit. That possibility is that we are made in the likeness of Christ who had a body while on earth, presently has a body and appeared in a body in the Old Testament on several occasions. Since Jesus is the same yesterday, today and tomorrow could it be that He has always had a body? Even in eternity past? In the New Testament we read that He is the image of the invisible God and that in Him dwells all the fullness of the Godhead bodily. If He (Christ) has always had a body, and we know that He will always have one, then we could well carry the physical image of God in the person of Christ.

Conclusion

All of us, regardless of pedigree, are born in sin. We are sinners by nature. All of us stem from Adam. Sin is a part of the inherited nature. The only antidote for the poison of sin is faith in Jesus Christ. Most people think they are "good," and probably they are, but the question is not one of being good or bad. The question is: since "all have sinned," have they accepted God's plan of grace? Have you?
